

MADISON HIGH SCHOOL

2016-2017 SCHOOL PROFILE

School and Community

Madison High School is located in Marshall, NC in Madison County. Madison County spans 452 square miles and located deep in the Appalachian mountains of Western North Carolina. Bordering Tennessee, much of the county's terrain is rugged and sparsely populated. Within the county are 11 townships, 1 comprehensive high school, 1 early college high school, 1 middle school, and 3 elementary schools. Asheville-Buncombe Technical School has a satellite campus in Marshall.

Mars Hill University is also located in Madison County and is the oldest college in Western North Carolina. Madison High School is a four year comprehensive high school enrolling just over 600 students in grades 9-12. Madison High School was opened in the fall of 1974. It consolidated the high schools previously located at Hot Springs, Laurel, Mars Hill, Marshall, and Spring Creek. Madison High School has 55 teachers of whom 100% are highly qualified and 24% have advanced degrees. Approximately 55% of the students at Madison H.S. receive free/reduced lunch.
